Baldacci Family Vineyards

California is infamous for its temperate weather and bountiful vegetation, making it an unparalleled place to be for spring. Up and down the coast, the Golden State experiences a gorgeous annual evolution that makes the winter all worth the while. Even as our cooler season winds down, flowers begin to blossom. Whether you're on the hunt for the next great Super Bloom spot or prefer to indulge in spring with a little wine, read on for where to see the best of California's blooming season.

Mustard Season

From January to March, yellow splashes across Napa Valley for mustard season. During these months, the vineyards see bright yellow flowers (wild mustard blooms) blossom to make way for a new growing season.

Baldacci Family Vineyards

With a patio that overlooks the estate, Baldacci Family Vineyards is a picturesque place for wine tasting. Alongside a glass of wine in hand, guests relish in sights of the mountain range, blue skies and bountiful wild mustard. Guests get to choose between curated wine tasting experiences, like the classic portfolio tasting or, for more adventure, the all cabernet tasting with the cave tour.
